THE COURIER-GAZETTE

By PORTER & FULLER.

A MODERN PAPER.

Secretary Lincoln wants to be David Davis' successor in the Senate. Does he think he can fill David's seat?

There is said to be a large private garden in a suburb of San Francisco which is to be made a labyrinth, by means of thick foliage and winding paths so that a person might wander in it for an hour without finding his way out. In the course of a short but singularly brilliant career we have been into several such gardens of an evening looking for strawberries and such things, and it seemed as if we never would get out of the labyrinth before the dog got in his work.

They played rather a mean trick on a Rockland man the other evening. Several of the boys were in a store, and this man was one of the number. The boys knew that he couldn't read, though he always assumes that he can. So one of them picked up a paper and pretended to read a paragraph, laughed and handed the paper to the next, who in turn took it, didn't read the same item, laughed also, and passed the paper along. It went around the crowd, each one laughing at the bogus article. Finally the paper was handed to the man who couldn't read. He took it, held it upside down, gazed earnestly at a patent medicine notice, burst into a loud guffaw, slapped his leg three times, and swore it was the neatest thing he had seen for two years, and said these funny papers were getting so kinky he didn't know where they'd ever stop. The boys went into an oyster saloon and smiled.

WAR CORRESPONDENTS.

The war in Egypt appears to be taking a new bent and it looks as if this country would sooner or later get drawn into the controversy. It is well known of course that both sides in the row have had to depend largely upon the advice of the New York Herald correspondent, but lately that young man has been slightly off his feed and the result has been bad. In the first place he took to writing sarcastic things about Arabi, and criticizing certain war measures of that rebel chieftain, whereas it was well known that those measures were proposed by the correspondent himself, and he was ready to take the credit of them had they been successful, but there was a mistake somewhere in the calculations, and the thing was a failure. Whereupon the correspondent sent home a telegram ridiculing the whole transaction and poking no end of fun at Arabi's generalship, and alluding to him as a copper colored blacksmith in the art of war. This had a tendency to rile the Egyptian and the result was that he has since refused to have anything to do with the Herald representative. Soon after this the newspaper man demanded an appointment upon the staff of the English general, but this was refused, unless he would consent to submit his dispatches to censorship the same as the English correspondents have to do. To do a thing that would cramp his vivid imagination in such a manner the Herald man indignantly refused, and he told Gen. Wolsley plainly that it was jealousy on his part that induced the military man to take such a step, and he sternly refused to give the general any further benefit of his advice. In this way the correspondent found himself aloft, and soon after as he was journeying across the desert, a pack of Arabi's Bedouins got after him, and they chased the poor fellow till his clothes fell off, he had to ride so hard. He finally caught up with a detachment of British cavalry, and was mistaken by them for a Bedouin, not having any clothes on, and they nearly shot him full of holes before he could convince them of the error of their way, and show them that he was only an American disguised in the costume of the country. Of course it is a big thing to be correspondent for the New York Herald and have the management of both sides of a foreign war, but it requires a fat head to do it and not make a mistake once in awhile. There are those who read the despatches and envy the happy lot of a foreign correspondent, and say what an easy time he has, associating with kings and generals and things, but they little think of the ghastly array of nerve that it requires to run the consolidation. It is dreadfully wearing on the intellect.

THE ELECTION.

Our State Goes Severely Republican in Every Particular.

Robie is About 7000 ahead of Plaisied.

Four Republicans Go to Washington Next Year.

It Seems That Knox County Elects Nary a Repub.

Complete Vote of City and County.

The election, which took place in this State yesterday, resulted, as we have always supposed it would—and as we have predicted in answers to special requests from the Boston Herald and Boston Globe that we would give those papers our views as to the result prior to the election—in a complete triumph of the Republican party. We had some doubt of the complexion of the Legislature, but never had any as to the election of Governor and the whole Congressional ticket. The result proves that our predictions as to Governor and Congressmen were correct, and that our faith as to the complexion of the Legislature was not so strong as it should have been.

The returns from 209 cities and towns show the following vote:

	Robie	Plaisied	Chase
Robie	46,429
Plaisied	38,685
Chase	633
Vinton	192
Scattering	162

Showing a plurality for Robie of 7,744. These towns in 1880 gave Davis a plurality of 2,432 votes; making a net Republican gain of 5,312.

The towns to be heard from gave Plaisied, in 1880, a plurality of 2,658. Should the gain in these towns be in the same ratio as the votes thus far received the plurality for Robie will be 8,759. But this is hardly to be expected, though it would not be surprising now. Our opinion is that the plurality for Robie will be from 7,500 to 8,000. The vote for Solon Chase does not come up to the anticipation of his friends and the vote for Vinton the "Independent Republican" candidate for Governor is next to nothing.

The vote for Congressmen will not vary 1000 from that for Governor. Messrs. Reed, Dingley, Boutelle and Milliken the Republican candidates, are elected by majorities varying from 7000 to 8000. Reed and Dingley run the highest on the ticket. Mr. Murch, on the fusion ticket, leads his colleagues in this section, but he is buried under an avalanche of 7000 votes. This result gives the Republicans a net gain of three, as in the present Congress they have but one majority in our delegation.

The Legislature will be largely Republicans in both branches. In the Senate the Republicans gain one in Somerset, one in Lincoln, and four, probably, in Penobscot, and lose one in Knox. The Senate will consist of 25 possibly 27 Republicans to 4 or 6 fusionists. The House will contain a majority of, at least 30 Republicans, thus insuring an executive council in consonance with the views of Gov. Robie.

The Republicans carry thirteen counties in the State, gaining Somerset and Penobscot. The counties carried by the Fusionists are Aroostook, Knox and Waldo, in which counties the Republicans made large gains on the vote of 1880.

To sum up the whole matter, it is the greatest Republican victory since the election of 1856, when Hamlin swept the State so triumphantly over Gov. Wells. It is a complete overthrow of fusionism, and, hereafter, the Democrats will, in all probability, take themselves out of the mess in which they have become involved and stand firmly upon their own national party foundations.

THE COUNTY VOTE.

With considerable hard work we are enabled to lay before our readers this early this afternoon the full and official vote of Knox County, with the exception of the unimportant ballot of Matineus. Muscle Ridge throws no vote this year. Two years ago the country gave Plaisied 4224, Davis 2899—a fusion majority of 1325. This year Plaisied has 3457 and Robie 2590, fusion majority 867, a gain for the republicans of 458. We speak of the plurality in the sense of majority. The Chase vote is surprisingly small. The fusionists elect every county officer. The independent republican and prohibition vote was nowhere.

On the republican ticket Sheriff Spaulding and Mr. Rawson, candidate for register, made the best showing, running ahead of their tickets. The fusionists gain a senator and one representative here. In the following tabulations we have included all ballots cast for candidates in which names or initials may have slightly varied:

REPRESENTATIVES ELECTED.

Rockland—O. G. Hall and John S. Case (R.)

Appleton Hope and Washington—Stephen S. Bartlett, (F.)

Camden—Hosea B. Eaton, (F.)

So. Thomaston, Vinalhaven, No. Haven and Hurricane—Levi W. Smith, (F.)

Warren and Union—Edwin S. Bucklin, (F.)

Cushing, St. George and Friendship—Francis C. Hathorne, (F.)

Thomaston and Muscle Ridge—Joseph E. Moore, (F.)

Total—Republican, 2; Fusion, 6—A fusion gain of one.

THE CITY VOTE.

The election was very quiet in the city. Both parties worked earnestly but without excitement. Mr. Hall was slightly behind the ticket from reasons connected with the Ward 7 question, while Mr. Case runs largely ahead. The republican gain corresponds with the gain throughout the state. We give the city vote by wards.

MAINE MATTERS.

The Texan fever has appeared in Dixmont, and eight cattle have died.

A gang of thieves operating at Winthrop, a few nights ago, stole a horse, wagon, harness robes, etc., from different individuals. Wednesday 30th, they stole a good horse phaeton and harness from John Green. Officers are pursuing the robbers.

B. W. & H. F. Morse's blacksmith shop at Bath was burned Tuesday morning, and house adjoining owned by Seth Woodward. Eliza Potter loses in tools $500, and the Morses' $500 on building insured. Loss on house and furniture $500 no insurance.

Hon. Luther H. Hutchinson, speaker of the House of Representatives, died at his home in Lewiston, last Friday aged 38. He was an able lawyer and a much esteemed citizen of his city and State. Mr. Hutchinson has been in ill health for some time. The immediate cause of his death was blood poisoning from the kidneys.

Arthur Stacy, of Augusta, a young man about 25 years of age, committed suicide at 12:45 o'clock, Thursday morning by cutting his throat with a razor, severing both arteries and cutting everything through to the back of the neck. The young man has been in ill health for some time, but has shown no suicidal symptoms.

A lady at Biddeford Pool, who had prepared for bathing, found she had forgotten to take out her $400 diamond earrings, which she then took out and threw into the lap of a friend. When she came out she called to her friend, who jumped up, forgetting the earrings, which rolled into the sand. When they remembered them, search was made, and after a long time they were found. The tide rolled over the beach three times before discovery.

AMERICAN HUMOR.

A tele

ONE OF THESE DAYS.

Curled in the window-seat,
Watching the leaves
Whirling, while raindrops beat
Down on the eaves,
Dark seemed this world that day.
We two alone,
Changing to gold the gray,
Lived in our own
Dreaming, as childhood dreams,
Life must be good.
Whispering of nobler themes,
Seared and understood;
Dreaming all love was true,
Eager with praise,
Smiling at all we do
"One of these days."

Here to the window-seat
Came you and I,
Whistling with his noiseless feet
Time hurried by;
Here as in childhood days
Used we to dream,
Careless of wiser ways,
Love was our theme,
Sometimes I wondered, dear,
How it should last,
But the next moment, dear,
Doubts were all past.
Past as you answer me,
"Love never strays";
Happier still we'll be
One of these days."

Now by the window-seat
Stand I alone,
While the wind drives the sheet
Making its moan,
Clouds might obscure the sun,
Sometimes of old,
But while Hope's sands do run,
Hearts find the gold,
Love, when the angel band
Called you away,
When in my clasp your hand
Fascinated lay,
Faintly your whisper then
Answered my gaze,
"Love, we shall meet again
One of these days."

Correspondence Lewiston Journal.

CARIBOU, July 24th.

Much has been written about Aroostook county, but evidently there are still some who need enlightening upon that subject; for, during a recent trip "outside" I was asked such questions as "Are not most of the people in Aroostook Bionese?" and "Is it a good place for bear and deer hunting?"

Yes, Messrs. Editors, it is an excellent place to hunt for bears, but there is no danger of being "chewed up." There is also an abundance of deer. The trouble with most accounts of Aroostook county is that they are wholly for or wholly against the county. Newspaper descriptions, especially are prone to give only the pleasant side of the story. Having spent nearly two years in making a farm in the woods, I have seen something of the other side. Perhaps a brief account of the advantages and disadvantages of this part of the State may be interesting to your readers. What sort of a country, then, is Aroostook?

THE CLIMATE.

Aroostook county comprises nearly one-fifth part of the State, having an area of 6800 square miles, an excellent soil and a cold climate. Yes, it is very cold. Some say it is no colder than in the southern part of the state, but it is. In the first place, it is reasonable that it should not be so cold 150 or 200 miles south; secondly, new countries are always more frosty than old ones; and, finally, the power of Jack Frost in this northern latitude is attested by my own frost-bitten ears which "outside" were frost proof. When I came from Kennebec, the first of April, the ground was nearly bare of snow; here I found two feet of snow, and the snow-plough in use upon the road. But the cold weather brought its compensation. While the Kennebeckers were dragging through mud and snow-drifts, Aroostook people had excellent sleighing until the latter part of April. After all, we get to farming nearly as early as farmers do in Kennebec,—usually about the first of May. This year is unusually backward. Not much farming was done until the middle of May. If I mistake not, "outsiders" are not much ahead of us.

ITS PEOPLE AND ENTERPRISES.

We have good, intelligent, enterprising, Yankee population for a basis, with a goodly number of Swedes, Frenchmen, Blue-noes, etc. Aroostook is no longer an immense wilderness (though there are still many square miles of wild land) with only here and there a few isolated inhabitants. This part of country is by no means sparsely settled. Our own town has 650 souls; while Caribou village, with its rapidly increasing business, its large business blocks, its mills, railroad and telegraph, its newspaper, starch factory and cheese factory, its full complement of lawyers, doctors, ministers, etc., is representative. Fort Fairfield and Presque Isle are about the same size, and equally smart and enterprising. Numerous other villages are growing up around us.

FAIRM-MAKING.

Here are thousands of acres of excellent land waiting to be made into farms. The man who makes one of these farms, if he is poor, (most men who make new land farms here are poor) must work hard and fare hard. The gentlemen who visited this country last year, and described it as "a land flowing with milk and honey" evidently did not get out into the suburbs. If they had gone out among the "Mossbackers," they would probably have found their fare changed from "milk and honey" to buckwheat and molasses. Buckwheat is as popular in Aroostook, as oats are in Scotland. But the land once cleared will well repay the clearer. To be sure not much Indian corn is raised here, and we have to almost steal a crop of beans, to save them from Jack; while we are liable to have our potatoes nipped, and our buckwheat cut down by the same agency. A frost every month in the year, or a "freeze" in midsummer does not seem to at all surprise old residents here. Yet, in spite of all these drawbacks, the crops which are raised here can not be beaten. The principal ones are wheat, oats, buckwheat, and potatoes. Our markets are now quite good and are constantly improving. It speaks well for Aroostook that while nearly all the men who came here in years past, were poor, so many of them now own big farms, good buildings, and are independent.

OLD FARMS AND NEW.

There is less swampy and waste land here than in the older portions of the state. Let no one who thinks of coming here, however, suppose that he can find a lot of land just suiting him that he can buy cheap. If he would buy an old farm he will find such farms held as high here as "outside." If one is to live upon an old farm he had better be there than here, for his crops will bring better prices there and he will have greater privileges. It is not upon the old farms that money is made fast here. It is upon the new land, while his crops can be raised without dressing. If he wishes to be near a village he will have to pay for the privileges he secures. Good land can be got cheap only at a distance from the villages, and by the sacrifice of many privileges. On many lots a lack of water is a serious drawback, as getting water by the way of a well drilled in the ledge which underlies a large portion of the surface, is costly business. Many men have been induced to buy soft wood lots, being told by the owners or real estate agents that the timber would pay for the land. Men acquainted with Aroostook land, would not take such lots as gifts to make farms of. High ridges afford the greatest safety from frosts; hard wood land, the easiest clearing and best sites for farms. I think more people are at the present time than are coming into it. Many young men are going West. Some of them come back, almost before we are aware that they have gone, better satisfied with Aroostook than ever. Others stay and like better there than here. Many persons came here during the "hard times," being driven from shoe-shops and factories by lack of business. They knew little of farming—nothing of new land farming. Some bought swamp lots, thus starting wrong at the outset. Some of these men had that pluck and energy which wins success anywhere, and are doing well. Others become homesick and discouraged and are leaving. One man who has just left here, went away $300 poorer than he came four years ago. He is a first-rate fellow, and may do well in some other business, but he is no more fit for an Aroostook farmer than a Lewiston High School girl is fit to be a Western scout and Indian hunter. He actually sowed ten bushels of oats upon an acre of land.

LEAVING THE COUNTY

ADVANTAGES PERMANENT.

Doubtless outsiders will hear doleful stories from such people about Aroostook, but no one who contemplates coming here need be alarmed. Aroostook is just as good a place to come to as it was when people were rushing in here by the hundreds. Its advantages are not of that fictitious kind so common in the West, but are permanent. When speculation has done its work and there comes another business crash, men will again begin to appreciate the value and stability of the farm, and there will be another rush to the fertile valley of the Aroostook.

ROCKY SOIL.

I used to hear it said that there were no rocks in Aroostook. That is not strictly true. There is land here with any quantity of rocks upon it. I know of outcrops that have been moved over for years that have rock heaps scattered over them just as one often sees fields "outside." On the other hand I have plowed new fields where the plow would turn up less stones than in old fields in Kennebec that have been picked off rocks year after year. Most of the rocks are small, such as a man can throw readily into a cart. Large boulders are very scarce. Beech land is apt to be rocky. A birch and maple growth is preferable.

FRUIT-GROWING.

An important question with people who think of moving here is: Can apples be raised here? The young apple trees which we carefully set last year, and which are now nearly all winter killed do not look very encouraging. I don't think this will ever be a great fruit growing section. There are a few quite good orchards here. It is probable that in a few years an abundance of hardy apples will be raised here.

THE BEST PART OF MAINE.

We now have daily mails from Bangor. Before many years a more direct railroad must be built in here. The best fifth part of the state will not always put up with the present facilities for transportation.

I do not claim that Aroostook is the best part of the world, but I do think it is the best part of Maine in which to make money by farming. I would not advise a man who owns a good farm in the older part of the state to sell it and come here, but I think a poor man who has got to make a new start will do as well here as anywhere. Perhaps young men who are willing to do as much and bear as much upon this northeastern frontier as they would have to upon the western frontier, will do as well here as there. W. I. F.

There is no one man in Michigan in whose presence, as soon as he gets well, it will be fatal to mention warm weather. "He got on top of a barrel to fix a ham-mock on his porch. The barrel-head caved in under him; then the barrel upset and rolled down the steps and clear across the yard with the man in it. When this trouble began it was only a common salt barrel, but when the man got out its inside was so thoroughly lined with hair, pieces of skin, clothing and profane language that it is thought petroleum oil wouldn't leak through it. Louisville Courier-Journal.

They were sitting by the seaside, wrapt in silent contemplation of the rushing bounding billows. Suddenly she rested her soft, dimpled hand upon his manly knee, and looking up into his face asked, "Tell me, Reginald, what makes the tide to rise and fall?" "The moon, dearest." "But mother says there will be no moon next week. Then there will be no tides?" Reginald told her he didn't mean that, but what he did mean he would give considerable to find out.—Boston Transcript.

EXIT MR. MURCH.

By the terms of the popular vote of this state, yesterday, Hon. Thompson H. Murch retired to private life. Mr. Murch's election to Congress from this district four years ago was the outcome of a series of events whose result was doubtless as much of a surprise to that gentleman as it was to the public. Called, almost as it were, from the rough and unfinished granite block of the stonecutter, possessed of scarcely any of that peculiar education which fits a man for the busy arena of public life at Washington, Mr. Murch's position was a difficult one. To his credit be it said that he lays aside the toga, quietly, as he donned it modestly, and goes back to private pursuits having won the respect of all men. He has not been a brilliant figure in political circles—that hardly was to be expected—but when the early life of the man is considered, the credit of having successfully accomplished what thousands of men in like circumstances would have failed in, must be awarded him. A raw man, untried in politics, he was thrust into the whirl at Washington and we cannot point to an instance in which he lost his head. There were many temptations held out to inexperienced men like him, but Mr. Murch, if any of them came home to him, withstood them all. No man is to be inordinately praised for doing right, for that is simply his duty, but when the times are so rife with tales of political rascality, a clean man stands out with pleasing prominence. Mistakes Mr. Murch has made—they were to be expected, but they were of the head. Charges of jobbery, of trickery, of whatever congressional meanness, rest not at his door. He lays off his garments unspotted and unsullied, and goes back to private life bearing the fairly-earned respect of all classes of politics.

New England Manufacturers' and Mechanics' Institute.

The New England Manufacturers' and Mechanics' Institute demonstrated last year the justice of their claim to be considered an institution to introduce to the attention of the markets of the world, the product of New England's industry. They do likewise this year. But, in addition, the aspect of the Exhibition takes on an educational characteristic. The processes of manufacture that will be demonstrated at its forthcoming exhibition are too numerous to be here mentioned. But it is proper and feasible to point out the importance to New England that this Exhibition so far as it relates to its Southern exhibits, and the states of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Tennessee furnish to swell up this magnificent display. Contributions from its mines, its forests and its fields. New England's capital and labor is invited to contribute to the process of Nature and to make of the South the greatest use possible of its abounding natural resources.

Not the least among the attractions is the Art Display which it is safe to predict, is the largest and finest ever presented to the visiting public of Boston, and it is to be noted, every picture is for sale to an intending purchaser.

Altogether, no one can spend a pleasanter and more instructive hour or day than in the immense building of the Institute amidst this wonderful collection of displays. Particularly is the day of opening, Sept. 6th, interesting when the Governors of the New England states and of the Southern States specified, will be in attendance and an address will be delivered by Edward Atkinson, well known to be an authority on all questions relating to New England industrial life.

All are advised to attend, whether they be in search of amusement or information.

Joseph H. Freeman has been drawn Grand Juror and Elijah Norton Traverse Juror from this town.

The household effects of Rev. R. S. Dixon were sold at public auction Monday. Elijah Norton acted as auctioneer.

A Union caucus was held at the Town Hall last Thursday evening which ratified Mr. Hathorn's nomination for representative in the legislature. If Mr. Hunt thinks the writer intends to make any comments on the caucus doings he will be most wonderfully mistaken.

Mr. H. has had enough to contend with the past month.

Election passed off very quietly. Less than one half of the voters exercised their right of suffrage. Gushue and Jameson suffered some from rheumatism and the jack-knife. Mr. Conner of Thomaston ran ahead of his ticket. There would have been more Chase votes thrown had not outside influences been brought to bear on the voters, and also the forced absence from the polls of some citizens.

PARSONS RE-UNION.—The annual Parsons reunion was held in Cushing on the original Parsons farm last Tuesday. The day was beautiful and nature seemed in harmony with the occasion. After the choice viands had gone the way of the internal revenue, Isaac J. Burton, of Warren, mounted the rostrum and read an original poem, called "A Lamplight Contemplation" (?) The scribe followed him with a brief address on "A Duty Accomplished—a Duty to be Performed." After the delivery it was voted to have it published in THE COURIER-GAZETTE at some future time. When the scribe heard this he buried his face in his hands and his hands in the alders and—blushed. The exercises concluded with addresses by the following gentlemen: Wm. Parsons, of Friendship; Samuel Payson, of Northport; and Joshua Daggett, of Cushing, and I. J. Burton, of Warren. We shall at some convenient time reduce Mr. Payson's remarks to writing and have the readers of this paper enjoy a true but humorous tale. The re-organization was effected with the choice of the following officers: President—Wm. W. Parsons, of Round Pond; Vice Presidents—Capt. James Parsons of Friendship and Oliver M. Vinal, of Thomaston; Secretary—I. J. Burton, of Warren; Treasurer—Alexander Singer, of Warren; Financial and Investigating Committee—I. J. Burton, Alvin M. Vinal, Alden Boggs and Wm. Parsons; Literary Committee—Misses Susan A. and Mary E. Creighton, of Warren. It was voted to meet at the same place on the first Tuesday in September 1883. Adjourned.

Rev. G. W. Bowers is in Camden looking in better health than when he left something like one year since.

Paul Stevens from Washington arrived last Sunday morning.

CAMDEN.

Frank Russell is in town.

N. B. Milliken from Washington is in town. W. Freeman of Central Fall, R. I., is visiting in town.

The woolen mill expects to shut down very soon for repairs.

Mrs. Fessenden from Boston sang at the Baptist Church last Sabbath.

Rev. A. Church, is building an addition to his house, running to his barn.

A severe form of diarrhoea is prevailing among the children proving fatal in many cases.

H. H. Cleveland has been grading a lot north of his residence and will make a beautiful lawn when completed.

Currier Brothers have had the misfortune to lose one of their grey truck horses which is the third one lost.

The Howarth double show, Irish characters and varieties, is billed for Camden for Friday evening, the 15th inst.

Rev. W. F. Chase, Methodist, from Rockport, preached at the Congregationalist church last Sabbath, in exchange with Rev. W. R. Cross.

It is generally believed that the Stetson block recently purchased by D. H. Bisbee is to be fitted up and used by the Camden National Bank. The building could be put to no better use.

Ed. Rose of Rose Bros., is expecting a visit soon from Duncan M. Fuller, a former resident of this town, and they together will go on a vacation trip.

The annual excursion from Bath to Camden, took place on Friday, and we were pleased to see our streets filled with people from Bath and other places along the line of the K. & L. R. R.

A new and elegantly designed sign has just been hung at the second story of D. G. Hunter's blacksmith shop, bearing the firm name of A. L. Horton & Co., house, sign and ornamental painters.

If we can place any dependence upon what people say, S. L. Milliken will run behind the party vote in this town. We speak of this in advance of voting (at this writing) because if such proves to be the case it is liable to be charged to the influence of T. R. Simonton, esq. But we are in a position to know that Mr. Simonton has used no such influence, but on the contrary has acted the part of an honorable gentleman in this whole matter, and although failing to get the nomination for Congress he has given ten days to stumping on state and national issues under republican colors.

SOUTH THOMASTON.

Stewart Tripp is doing quite a business in the granite line. His granite takes well in the market, and we hope it will continue.

B. H. Clay has purchased a horse to match his leader "Jumbo." Bush now has a good four horse team and we hope is making them pay hauling granite.

The St. George Band did themselves great credit at the Fusion meeting Friday. Although a new band they rendered several selections finely.

Geo. F. Thordike, who has been in Boston for several months, returned home last week, and intends to take a course in the Rockland Commercial College. George will make his mark in the world.

The greenbackers held another meeting last Friday evening, at which Hon. Thompson H. Murch spoke. Mr. Murch was not well and spoke at disadvantage. He was followed by George L. Snow and Leonard R. Campbell.

It is with sorrow that we learn of the death of one of our oldest and most respected citizens, Mrs. Priscilla Newhall. She was a lady who had very many warm friends, who will ever remember her many noble qualities. Her family have the sympathy of the public.

At the republican rally held last Wednesday evening B. H. Clay called the meeting to order and Geo. T. Sleeper was chosen president, who with a few appropriate remarks introduced Gen. John L. Swift, of Boston, who went at the fusionists "double and thick" and presented the issue of the day in fine style. The Rockland Band was in attendance and played in their usual fine way.

HOPE.

Not a political speaker in town this fall. Miss Carrie Quinn has gone to Mendon.

Llewellyn Wiley and family of Mass. are visiting friends.

Alonso Mansfield and family have gone to Malden to spend the winter.

Mathias Barrett of Florida and wife have made their friends a short visit.

Wm. Harkness has painted his house and built a portico over his front door.

Mrs. S. L. Bills and daughter Gracie are spending the week at Dea. Payson's at Rockport.

James Sweetland has sold his farm to a Mrs. Rapp, near Pease. Her husband at present is in the far west.

We understand that Daniel Ludwig, of Mass., formerly of Camden, is negotiating for the Plummer farm.

Frank Clough is building an ell on the west end of his father-in-law's, J. H. Hobbs, preparatory to keeping house.

Rev. F. W. Bailey, of Jeffrey, N. H., occupied our pulpit last Sunday and also preached here next Sabbath. He spent the summer with us five years ago. We were all very glad to see him again.

VINALHAVEN.

A lively winter is anticipated.

Chas. Carver started for home Monday.

The Town Hall is being repaired and painted. Some of the plans for the new job has arrived.

The singing at the Union Church Sunday was fine.

Granite Lodge is holding some very interesting meetings.

The election ball at Granite Hall Monday evening was a success.

Joseph Black is doing a large business in the paving line this summer.

The Bodwell Glass Co. are making preparations to begin upon their new job.

The excursion Saturday was not very largely attended, but a good time was reported.

The Tea Tray Cadets are making preparations for a grand entertainment before long.

Parties are making arrangements to erect a windmill over the artesian well on the common.

Miss Allie B. Crocker, of Rockland, arrived by boat Tuesday night to instruct the Tea Tray Cadets in their drill.

MIRACULOUS!

Wonderful Escape of a Number of Our Prominent Citizens.

An Arch Enemy Foully Conspires to Destroy Their Lives.

Full Statement by the Survivors—Their Painful Experience.

An alarming state of affairs has been discovered in our midst. Hundreds of our citizens have been seized with mysterious symptoms of illness, which have puzzled learned physicians and scientists alike. Some have rapidly succumbed to the disease by the wayside, like parched and thirsting plants under the scorching and withering rays of a pitiless sun. Others have suffered all the pangs and tortures of the horrible inflammation. Their limbs have been racked with excruciating pain, while their bodies have been burned with an inward and consuming fire, insupportable and unquenchable, until mind has been destroyed, and the soul tortured beyond human endurance. Some of their friends have suggested poison, basing their opinion, perhaps, on certain astounding revelations made by the deceased. In some cases of blood-poisoning, and if so, in what manner of form was the contamination brought about? Have our friends, who have been so ruthlessly taken away from us, been made the unwitting victims of treacherous men, who, under the garb of friendship, have sought their acquaintances, and in secrecy picked them up by the poisoned poison? A reporter was put upon the trail, given plenty of time to investigate the affair, and commanded to probe the mystery to its very bottom, sparing no pains in prosecuting the inquiry. It was necessary first to interview some of those who had passed through the trying ordeal in safety, and obtain from them an account of their several experiences. The first person interviewed was Mr. Frank Dixon, a tonsorial artist known to about all of our principal business men. He is now engaged as Lawton's tonsorial rooms, on North Main street. Mr. Dixon said that the malady completely used him up. "Why," said he, "I could not get out of my bed; whenever I desired to vacate my bed I had to be lifted out of it, and I could not go up and down stairs without the aid of others. I had no sleep, and I was attending me. They do not mix with this medicine and then with that, but without giving me any relief. Finally, when I had obtained given up all idea of getting better, some one asked me why I did not try Hunt's Remedy. I had but little faith in the compound, still I was persuaded to get a bottle of it. I had taken two bottles of the quantity contained in that one bottle I began to feel its good effects, and by the time I had finished the third bottle I was able to get out of my bed, and I was now engaged in my business. I bought another bottle of the Remedy and took half of it, and since then I have never been troubled with the malady, which proved in the end to have been an uncommonly severe attack of the kidney complaint. I see people every day talking about their streets whom I know, if they had used Hunt's Remedy, would have been long away to sleep the long sleep months ago. My attack was seven or eight years ago, and I tell you it was a pretty tough one. I was in very bad shape. Some idea of what I suffered can be gained from the fact that my weight fell from 170 pounds to 120 pounds."

Still more wonderful was the experience of Mr. Stephen G. Mason, of No. 319 South Main street. Mr. Mason said that in 1869 he was attacked with an inflammation of the kidneys, which was of so severe a nature that he did not take a step in four months. His physicians thought that he was paralyzed on one side of his body. From that time until the spring of 1880, he suffered very much with pains in his knees, which had become decidedly stiff. He was unable to bend his knees, and he was unable to move. In the fall of 1880, he was in his office talking with Mr. William E. Clarke, proprietor of Hunt's Remedy, when Mr. Clarke told him he could be cured. "I know I cannot," said Mr. Mason, "I have taken every medicine and the physicians say a cure is impossible." Mr. Clarke again claimed that a cure could be made, and that Hunt's Remedy would do the business. Mr. Mason laughed at the idea, but Mr. Clarke asserted that it was kidney complaint and not rheumatism, and that Mr. Mason's success would be due to the fact that he had used Hunt's Remedy, and that all his troubles originated in those organs being disarranged, induced him to try Hunt's Remedy. Mr. Mason took the medicine for six weeks, and since then he has not been troubled with "rheumatism" of any kind or nature whatsoever. "I must attribute my relief from pain and suffering to Hunt's Remedy," said Mr. Mason. "I had been in the hospital for several years, but could afford only temporary relief."

Thus, the physician advised his patient to try Hunt's Remedy. Capt. Grant scouted at the idea, considering the Remedy "a snide," as he expressed it. Still, wishing to follow the advice of his physician, he purchased two bottles of Hunt's Remedy, and is now better than at any time during the past five years, and so far as present indications are concerned, has obtained a permanent relief. In fact, considers himself cured.

Mr. C. A. P. Mason, the well-known druggist, doing business at No. 61 High street, said: "I have known the medicine (Hunt's Remedy) for more than ten years. I never saw anything for kidney disease so recommended that would give as quick relief. I know of many persons who have used it, and all of them speak of it in the same way, as being worth all it costs to obtain quick relief. One man said he would have given $100 a bottle rather than have been without Hunt's Remedy."

Mr. George F. Clark, employed in the dress goods department at Ladd, Davis & Drummond's establishment, said that he suffered extremely with kidney disease, but that after using Hunt's Remedy just two days he was enabled to attend to his business again. He placed a high value on the Remedy, and considered it the most important acquisition to the list of the really meritorious and standard remedies of the day.

Capt. Augustus J. Winslow of the City Police Department told the reporter that he had been a great sufferer from kidney disease, which had attacked him four or five years ago. He had taken Hunt's Remedy, and had been cured by it. He considered that it could be taken by any man having kidney disease with beneficial results. There were hundreds of people afflicted with kidney disease who, by neglecting to attend to the matter in time, had either been wrecked physically or had died from the attack. He mentioned the late Chief of Police, A. J. Ayer, died of kidney disease, and in case, and when the autopsy was made it was found that one kidney was entirely gone and the other seriously affected. Hunt's Remedy, if it is used in time, might have saved his life. In conclusion, Capt. Winslow said that Hunt's Remedy was, in his opinion, the best medicine for kidney disease.

Mr. William H. Blanding, the wholesale druggist, Nos. 44 and 45, Weybosset street, told the reporter that he had sold Hunt's Remedy for 14 years, and he had seen that the medicine was a great success. He had seen it used by many people, and he had seen it cure many cases. He had seen it cure many cases of kidney disease, and he had seen it cure many cases of rheumatism. He had seen it cure many cases of blood-poisoning, and he had seen it cure many cases of skin diseases. He had seen it cure many cases of all kinds of ailments, and he had seen it cure many cases of all kinds of ailments.

Mr. Wm. Harkness has painted his house and built a portico over his front door.

Election day was quiet.
Look out for the cyclone!
Rockland needs a hand engine.
Drunk men yesterday were comparatively scarce.

Yesterday was a good day for the lively business.
A picnic party was held at Warrenton on Saturday.

The infantry boys handle the steamers in good style.
Chas. A. Davis is building an addition to his house on Broadway.

The granger beginneth to sort out his prize exhibits for the fair.

An open coal fire makes the Thorndike office cheerful of an evening.

There was some very fast driving on Union street Sunday evening.

The fire alarm Sunday night was sounded in good style. Keep it up.

Two big anchors from Camden were hauled through our streets Saturday.

James L. Jones has bought the Major Larrabee house on Hibernia street.

The season of evening fires is at hand, and happy the family that boasts of an open fireplace.

About 75 came on the special train from Thomaston to the republican meeting Tuesday evening.

Congressman Muren in his Saturday night talk showed himself to have made great progress as a speaker.

O. S. Andrews has leased the house at the corner of Middle and Lincoln streets, soon to be vacated by Rev. W. C. Barrows.

Two teams came into collision in front of A. L. Richardson's store, Thursday night and one of them had a shaft broken.

We have received from a Boston correspondent a very interesting account of a visit to Concord. It will appear next week.

One of the carriages going to the picnic at Owl's Head last Wednesday, ran into a rut and was overturned. No damage was done.

The heavy flagging in front of Masonic Block has been raised and straightened during the past week. C. S. Crockett and Fred Sweetland did the job.

A small boy is running a blowing machine on Limerock street and is heard of an evening reiterating the cry: "Come up and blow your head off! Only five cents."

On Saturday afternoon there were 38 teams of different kinds hitched along Main street and many more moving along the street. Rockland looked quite metropolis like.

This paper last week spoke of the late Deacon Ingraham leaving many ancestors. Our readers of course understood that that word was mistakenly written for descendants.

An elegant chaise, belonging to Doctor Armory of Boston, and which he has been using at Bar Harbor, attracted considerable attention at the wharf on Wednesday evening.

The First Baptist Sunday School went on a picnic to Owl's Head last Wednesday. The children were conveyed free of charge in hay-racks and carriages. About 100 were present and all had a pleasant time.

The republican caucus last Friday night was well attended, there being over 200 present. Only two ballots were necessary resulting in the nomination of O. G. Hall and John S. Case for Representatives to the Legislature.

The Knox and Lincoln Conference of the 2nd Advent denomination is to be held in this city at Burpee Hall, commencing Thursday, Sept. 21st, and holding over Sunday. Elder Partridge of Whitefield is to be presiding elder.

The Rockland Band played at So. Thomaston on Wednesday evening at the republican meeting addressed by Gen. Swift. In the absence of Meservey, who was at Bath with the Rockport Band, Chas. Gale acted as leader.

The correspondent who mails us a slip cut from this paper with a poetical comment adjoined, is assured that the same was read with interest. And he is further assured that the matter originally struck us about as it did him.

Messrs. Blaine and Gibson held quite a reception at the Thorndike House, where they stopped, on Tuesday evening after the lecture. The two visitors were in excellent spirits, and Gibson kept the party in good humor by his Ohio wit and pleasantities.

Two immense loads of limerock were driven through our streets Saturday by Sewall Hewett and Willard Colburn, teamsters for Perry Brothers. The two loads were drawn on A. F. Crockett & Co's scales and weighed respectively 15,000 and 13,200 pounds.

On Saturday afternoon two drunken fellows drove through Main street. On turning the corner of Middle street one of them fell out and struck his head on the edge of the sidewalk, stunning him. Dr. Banks was summoned who brought the fellow to and enabled him to proceed on his drunken career.

Saturday evening Willie Abbott, son of William O. Abbott, fell from the platform of Abbott's Block to the ground, a distance of 15 feet striking on his head and shoulders. The boy was playing about the platform in front of his home, his parents occupying rooms in the southern part of the block. When picked up he was insensible. The doctor was summoned and the little fellow seen to, no bones being broken. There were fears of some internal injury, but the boy is improving and will undoubtedly come out all right.

The Blaine and Gibson meeting held in Farwell Hall last Tuesday evening was the republican meeting of the campaign in this city. At an early hour the hall was filled with people. When the speakers of the evening appeared on the stand tremendous applause greeted them. J. S. Case served as chairman. Hon. James G. Blaine was the first speaker and made one of the most logical and well defined speeches ever delivered here. He was followed by Gen. Gibson, of Ohio, who by his eloquence and wit held the attention of the audience till a late hour.

F. C. Knight is making an addition to his fine house on Beech street.

The St. Nicholas has been receiving some flattering press notices recently.

The closing rally of the campaign was held by the Fusionists at Farwell Hall on Saturday evening. The speakers of the evening were Hon. T. H. Murch, Geo. L. Snow, Chas. Dutton of Union and a Mr. Bartlett of Bath. A good number were in attendance.

One of the sailors arrested last week from schooner James Miller applied to Justice Hicks Saturday, for a warrant to search the vessel, claiming that during his absence some of his effects had been stolen. As he would make the warrant against no person the justice was unable to grant his request, and the sailor left in indignation.

On Saturday as Allison Shuman was crossing Main street he was run into by a passing team and quite severely injured. As he started across the road, someone, seeing the coming team, shouted to him to "look out." He jumped back, but was struck in the arm and shoulder, wrenching both severely. He will be unable to work for some time.

The Teacher's Institute to be held in this city on Friday and Saturday next promises to be an interesting and instructive meeting. Supt. Luce and other educators will be present to discuss important topics. The city schools will be closed and all teachers are expected to be present to gather up all the good they can. A list of the subjects and authors appears in our advertising columns. The meetings will be held in the High School building.

The citizens of Rockland, eager to hear the election news rushed into the Tillson armory last night not knowing that the boys were intending to drill. The militia kindly gave permission for the crowd to remain, and a collection was immediately taken up for the purpose of paying for the gas used and for cleaning the floor, which the muddy boots of our citizens had made anything but pure. The collection amounted to $7.05, and the crowd, appreciating the courtesy of the Tillsons, gave three rousing cheers for the infantry.

The four sailors of the brig James Miller, Capt. McGilvery, who were arrested for refusal of duty last Tuesday, were kept in the lockup until Saturday, when they were discharged. Two of them returned the advance, and the other two John Ranlett shipped aboard schooner Mary E. Vancleave, bound for Wilmington. Capt. McGilvery belongs in Seaport. The sailors claimed that the vessel was not fit to sail in and that the mate treated them harshly. Of Capt. McGilvery the sailors said they had no complaint to make. While confined in the lockup they had a jolly time, singing, hooting and carousing, to the delight of crowds of small boys who flocked around the door.

Saturday forenoon a little lad named George Leavitt, was driving John Ranlett's horse down to the lockup to procure the effects of the four sailors who have been confined there, two of whom had been shipped. The horse was harnessed into a truck team and as the boy turned him on the corner of Spring street, the team brought up against the granite post placed there. The horse jumped forward suddenly, pulled the reins from the boy's hand and started up Main street for the North-end at the top of his speed. The team came into collision with N. A. & S. H. Burpee's team, which was standing in front of O. S. Andrews' store, smashing it badly. The boy clung to the team until the horse slackened a little and then slid off behind and sat abruptly down in the road for a while to take in the situation. The horse was stopped near the Congregationalist Church.

As the season at Bar Harbor draws to a close it takes on a decidedly brilliant aspect. Sunday President Arthur and party arrived about noon, per United States Steamship Dispatch from Portsmouth. Secretary Chandler and Commodore English, Wilson and Wells accompanied them on the Tallapoosa. The president came ashore at 1 o'clock and dined with Mr. T. B. Musgrove. Secretary Chandler and wife were his guests also. The President is enjoying good health and had a pleasant trip, devoid of accident. The Atlantic squadron also arrived the same day and there was a grand naval parade and drill yesterday. President Arthur attended divine service on board the Tallapoosa at 12 m. Secretary Chandler and Senator Eugene Hale were present. The president breakfasted with Mr. Musgrove, drove around with Mrs. Eugene Hale and dined with Senator Hale. The President received Monday and was assisted by Mrs. Senator Hale. The President and Secretary left for New York in the afternoon.

Grand, square and upright pianos, musical instruments just received, without number at Smith's Music Store.

The shoe factory on Limerock street which has been unused for so long a time is to be torn down, taken to Warren and to be re-erected there in the place of the one recently burned. Farewell, a long farewell to all our hopes of re-establishment of the shoe industry in our midst.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union have elected officers for the ensuing years as follows: Mrs. G. W. Brainerd, President; Mrs. Francis Tighe, Mrs. O. A. Kallioch, Mrs. Edwin Sprague, Mrs. J. G. Torrey, Vice Presidents; Mrs. F. E. Calderwood, Secretary and Treasurer; Mrs. N. Wiggins, Collector.

The private boarding-house which has been kept by the Misses Stackpole for the past fifteen years is to be closed, and the boarders who have found it such a pleasant home are looking forlornly up and down the land for fast pastures. The house has been an institution in our city and many will regret its close. The two ladies who own it will lease a portion of the house and occupy the balance themselves, retiring from actual work.

The eleventh annual reunion of the First Maine Cavalry was held at Brunswick last Wednesday and was a very enjoyable time. About 125 members were present. Speeches were made by Gen. Joshua L. Chamberlain, Gov. Plaisant, Capt. C. A. Bontelle, Prof. Campbell, of Bowdoin College, and others. Henry A. Willis, of Thomaston, was elected recording secretary and Gen. J. P. Cilley of this city treasurer. The next reunion is to be held at Auburn.

Last night at about nine o'clock as Wm. and Edward Savage, brothers, in company with E. Orbeton and Gilman Simmons were on their way home, at the North-end, near Rankin Block they were met by three tramps, who jostled the Savage boys against the fence, and at once began using knives. Will was cut across the breast and Ed. on the arm, hand and breast. The cuts were not dangerous though they bled badly. They were fixed up in Pendleton's drug store. Two of the tramps were soon after arrested, and later five more of the gang, who had come into the city early in the evening. It is said that the tramp who did the cutting escaped. One of the number has eight slight flesh wounds. They were on trial this afternoon.

James Dunham and two young men went to Warren Sunday for the purpose of ensnaring the festive and popular pickerel. J. Dunham as usual was high line, capping the climax with a fifty pound mud turtle. James was fishing along the shore and discovered the m. in a hole in the bank. Shouting to the boys, he with unparalleled intrepidity waded into the mud turtle and knocked him out in three rounds. The turtle was heavily shelled, and throwing out skirmishers he endeavored to retreat in good order bringing his rear to bear upon the pond; but the fearless Dunham intercepted the retreat by a brilliant flank movement and advancing to the charge won a signal victory. On the back of the turtle were carved the following dates and initials: 1841, 1849, 1855, 1859, June 15th, 1882, F. J. J. C., E. E. J. The first date, 1841, must have been carved when the turtle was a number of years old, so that in all probability he was an old landmark. The shell of the beast is to be seen at J. P. Ingraham's.

Fire broke out at half-past eleven Sunday night in the one and a half story dwelling house of Mrs. Mary J. Lermont on Park street near the depot. The alarm was given at quarter of twelve and the engines were on the spot and had a stream on at five minutes past twelve. A little water was obtained from a well in the immediate vicinity which soon gave out. No water was nearer than the reservoir on Masonic street near the residence of E. K. Glover. Neither of the engines had enough hose to reach from the reservoir to the fire so the hose of the two engines were coupled together and the water was forced up Palmer's hill and across the intervening fields to the conflagration. This caused delay and meanwhile the adjoining 1 1/2 story house, owned by Catherine Sullivan, caught and burned briskly. The great strain upon the hose, on account of the tremendous pressure necessary to force the water such a distance, burst it, and it was found necessary to move the other engine to the top of Palmer's Hill. The first engine then played into a flour barrel and the other played from the aforesaid flour barrel in such cases made and provided and thence to the fire. The hook and ladder boys were present and did efficient service. The first building was insured for $500 and the furniture for $450. The second was insured for $850 and the furniture $400. A small two story building to the west of the Lermont house and owned by Mrs. Lermont was injured to the extent of $150. This building was occupied at overhead by Samuel S. Toman. The buildings were all insured at Cochran & Sewall's agency.

Steamship Robert Dickinson reports having spoken (date not given) lat. 30-33 N., lon. 59, 40 W., bark Will W. Case, Rockland, Me.; had lost fore and main mast in a gale Aug. 23d. Was proceeding under jury masts and having plenty of provision would make the nearest land. She had been leaking, but it was stopped. She was from New York with oil. The steamer brought letters for the captain's family, which have been forwarded.

Since the above was in type the following portion of a letter from Capt. Dermot to J. S. Case has been handed us:

On the 23d of August we took a hurricane from the ENE and it backed to the NW, the fury of which was so terrible that the power of a Shakespeare could give but a faint description. At noon the gale was at its height and continued until 6 p. m. before it abated away. At 2 p. m. ship settling fast, lower yards in the water on starboard side; half way or more of lower rigging severed; forest and tops of houses under; sea sweeping over in every direction everything movable washed away; crew washed away from pumps; in fact, pumps under water; bulwarks burst off and waterway started, ship filling and settling fast. Some of the crew worked with desperate energy. Cut away the masts which broke at the eyes of the lower rigging, taking the lower yards and everything. Two of the men cut away wreck and the rest pumping for life. At 3 or 4 p. m. moved upright, got a sound of the pump, had six feet of water in the hold and cargo shifted badly. We were hoisted on the right tack for the shift of wind in the cyclone, but was too near its center to work out of it. The roar of the wind and sea was deafening, and the sheets of spray had her entirely covered from truck to deck. Jib boom washed away. All our canvas was snugly furled. Lower topsail blew away about noon. I am trying to fetch some port in the United States, but have few spars to spread canvas on.

Chas. E. Weeks was in the city Sunday and last night returned to Boston with his wife, who has been visiting here for several weeks.

Mr. Blaine was suffering from a cold while in our city last week, notwithstanding which fact he spoke apparently without effort for an hour. His hair and beard have turned white since his last visit here, but he looked fresh and vigorous and is a very handsome man.

A few days ago the six Tibbets brothers—Charles, Henry, Horace, George, Samuel and Edwin—paid a visit to the old home place of their mother, in Whitefield. The occasion was a highly enjoyable one. Each man brought away from the farm-house some old relic as a souvenir of their visit.

A quiet but very pleasant wedding took place at the residence of Capt. Moses H. Fisk, last Wednesday forenoon, the occasion being the marriage of Miss Caddie S. Fisk to Arnold H. Jones, of THE COURIER-GAZETTE office. Miss Lizzie Jones was bridesmaid and W. O. Fuller, Jr., groomsmen. The ceremony was gracefully performed by Rev. J. J. Blair, in the presence of the bride's relatives and a circle of intimate friends of both parties. At its close the pair were heartily congratulated. Shortly after, a fine wedding breakfast was sat down to and heartily enjoyed. Mr. Jones and bride started for Boston by the afternoon train, their departure from the house being accompanied by good luck showers of rice and old shoes. They returned from Boston Saturday evening, and are now passing a week at Union. The presents were numerous and handsome. Mr. Jones came from New Brunswick to this city about six years ago and has been connected with this paper for four years. During his residence here his high character and good-fellowship have won him hosts of friends. His bride is a charming young lady who will adorn her new station in life.

Miss Minnie C. Andrews, formerly of this city, was married in Portland Thursday. The Press has the following account of the affair:

A very pretty wedding took place yesterday at St. Stephens Church. The parties were Frederick E. Jones, accountant for the Board of Railroad Commissioners for Massachusetts, and Miss Minnie Andrews, daughter of the late M. C. Andrews of Rockland, and Mrs. Eliza-beth Andrews, now of this city. The church was filled with friends of the couple, and the ceremony was performed, with the Episcopal service, most impressively, by Rev. James McWhinnie of Free Street Baptist Church. The bride wore an elegant satin walking dress of one of the new shades of blue, and the other details of costume corresponded. She was given away by her cousin, Frank S. Waterhouse, assistant county attorney. George W. Marston presided at the organ and discoursed most appropriate music before, during and after the ceremony. The ushers were Messrs. G. P. Lamphrey and N. U. Walker of Boston, W. S. Banks and George M. Clark of Portland. After the wedding the couple returned to the residence of the bride's uncle, J. W. Waterhouse, where an elegant breakfast was served. The parlors were magnificently decorated with flowers and rare plants and the presents, which were exhibited, were profuse in number, artistic and costly. The bride and bridegroom left for the west on a wedding tour by the 6 p. m. train. They will reside in Boston.

A stone-cutter named Wm. Birnie, about 40 years of age, went insane on Hurricane Isle last week. No dangerous symptoms were developed, but it was deemed best to have the man properly cared for. He was brought to this city Thursday and by the officials sent to the insane hospital at Augusta. Birnie came from Scotland to these parts last June. He was a very fine workman. He is unmarried. On the way to Augusta while at Bath the man became very violent, and had to be ironed and confined there two hours.

Deaths.

In this city, Sept. 7th, Asa D. Small, aged 62 years. Remains taken to Belfast for interment.

In this city, Sept. 4th, Geo. D. Martin, aged 73 years.

Camden, August 31, Horace H. Metcalf, aged 38 years.

St. Paul, Minnesota, September 3, Frank J., son of Jacob Rosa, formerly of Rockville, aged 27 years, 4 months, 25 days.

Births.

In this city Sept. 1st, to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gale, a boy.

In this city, Sept. 1st, to Mr. and Mrs. John S. Colson, a son.

In this city, Sept. 11, to Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Blacknell, a daughter.

Marriages.

In this city, Sept. 6, by Rev. J. J. Blair, Arnold H. Jones and Miss Caddie S. Fisk, both of Rockland.

In this city, Sept. 5th, by Rev. E. G. Eastman, at the residence of the bride's father, DESERTED.

Sarah Doudney, in Good Words.
Bright sea, far-flung the pebbled sand,
Flung thy foamy pearls from stone to stone,
Thy lullaby, low-murmured to the strand,
Sounded like a lover's tone!
And yet I know, elsewhere,
Some other shore as fair,
The waves have kissed, and left it dry and lone.

Bright sunshine, gleaming on my cottage wall,
Tracing the shadow of an ivy spray,
How tenderly thy golden touches fall
On common things to-day!
Yet, beneath other skies
Some land beauteous lies,
Deserted by thy glory, cold and gray.

Blithe bird, low-warbling underneath the eaves
An eager love song, passionate and shrill,
My heart is trembling and summer leaves
With sweet responsive thrill;
Yet far away, dear guest,
There is an empty nest,
Which thou hast left forsaken, void and still.

Fair sea, bright sunshine, bird of song divine,
I, too, may lose the tide, the light, the lay!
Others may win the kisses that were mine,
My night may be their day;
Yet, though the soul may sigh
For precious things gone by,
I shall have had my rapture, come what may!

ONE DAY'S SACRIFICE.

Virginia F. Townsend.

Oh, dear! I wish I knew what to do!
The lips were just like the tone, that moment half-pouting, half wistful; indeed,
this was the expression of the whole face, as it pressed itself closer up to the window-pane that morning.

It was a sweet face, though by no means a beautiful one, and you felt intuitively that the pout was improvised,
and that a smile was the indigenous expression of the full rounded lips, and of the clear hazel eyes.

They looked out, those eyes, on a winter morning cold and still, for the night before had woven its seamless robe
over brown field and barren hill, and the trees lifted up their charred foreheads
under the white baptismal of December.

Overhead the clouds were slowly
wrapping their grey folds away from the sun, and revealing pleasant interludes of soft, blue sky, the morning's blessed
prophesy written in the heavens above,
to the earth beneath, "The day shall be a bright one."

"What a glorious time they will have,"
murmurs Grace Hammond, while her little fingers move along the high frost
rim on the edges of the pane. "It's full fifteen miles to the green, and they'll be three hours getting there. Then such delicious sleighing as it will be, and there are twenty couples going, cousin Charley said."

"How I should enjoy it, with the late dinner, and the evening plays, and the delightful ride home by moonlight! Oh!
it seems to me I never wanted to go anywhere so much in my life."

"But then there's Mattie, dear child,
she'd enjoy it even more than I would,
buried up as she is, week after week, in
that old red school house, with those tire-
some boys and girls."

"Goodness! I believe it would drive
me crazy in less than a month, and yet
how very patiently and nobly she bears
it all."

"If her father hadn't made the wretched
speculation before he died, mortgag-
ing even the house they live in."

"Mrs. Palmer, with her feeble health,
and those two little children, all dependent on Mattie's services, and she so tenderly and delicately reared. I declare it makes my heart ache to think of it."

"Didn't she look sweetly, though, at our party the other evening. I spoke before I thought, 'Mattie, how becoming black is to you,' and then the tears came into her eyes. It was so very careless of me."

"Weston Hunt was really quite smitten with her. I could see this very plainly by the attention he paid her all
the evening, and then his inviting her to the sleighing party to-day proves this,
if ever anything did. Why, there isn't a girl in all Meadowbrook that wouldn't be proud of his attentions. And then,
how some of them have treated Mattie
of late, just because the family have lost their property. It's a perfect shame, I think."

"But about the sleigh-ride, that's the question, and I must decide now."

"Charley'll be so disappointed if I don't go," and the old, half-pouting,
half-resolute look dashed across the sweet face.

"But there's Mattie again. It would be such a change, such a pleasure to her to get out of the old school-room for a day; and if I were to teach for her, I could think when night came, I'd made her happy, if I had not been so myself."

"I will, too; that's settled now. Grace Hammond, you don't go on that sleighing party, to-day!"

And the young girl peoated this decision by bringing down her hand emphatically on the window-sill.

Grace Hammond's monologue must have given you a glance into her inner self, reader; and I can only outline for
you, very briefly, her mental character.
She was the only child of a wealthy farmer, petted, and half-spoiled from her infancy. But she was ardent and impulsive, with a deep, rich, loving nature,
which no extraneous circumstances
could entirely change. She had her faults, and they were many, but her heart—and it is a blessed thing when you can say this of a man or woman—
her heart was a true one.

"MATTIE DARLING,"—so wrote Grace Hammond ten minutes later—"you are going on this sleigh-ride, so just don't say another word about it. Cousin Charley told me that Mr. Hunt sent you the invitation about an hour ago, and I've taken a notion to play schoolma'am
for you to-day. I've been on scores of sleigh-rides this winter, and I think it will do you as much good to drop the mantle of your dignity on me to-day,
as it will do my giddy self to assume
it."

"So throw off that school hood from your brown curls, my darling, and call
up the old smile to the soft bloom of your lips, the old light to the summer
blue of your eyes; and in all the annals of youth, love and sleigh-rides, may there be no page so bright as the one this day shall write in the history of Mattie Palmer and Weston Hunt, most fervently prays your friend,

"GRACE HAMMOND."

"Not going, Grace! Why you're surely not in earnest," and a look of mingled chagrin and disappointment clouded the fine features of the young man, as he turned them on his companion.

"Yes, I am, Charley. You see, I've made an engagement for the day which renders it quite impossible for me to go.
I'm sorry, but it can't be helped."

Spite of her efforts, there was a little thread of disappointment running through the studied calmness of the speaker's voice.

"A fiddle on your engagements, Grace.
Why, this will be the grandest sleighing party of the season. Come, now, don't think for a moment of staying at home.
—We can't do without you at all; so go
and get ready in a hurry, for we start at
ten. There's a good girl."

Poor Grace; it was very hard to refuse the pleading of those dark, handsome eyes, for Charles Munson was more to the girl than most cousins; indeed, he was rather nominally than really her relative—although some marriages gave the young people the privilege of this appellation.

"Charley, do not urge me. I am very grateful for your invitation, and it pains me more than you can imagine to refuse it. But I am compelled to do this."

If Grace's manner was cool, it was because her words cost her such an effort.
"Very well, Grace. Of course, I shall not press my claims any further.
Excuse me, if in my desire to secure
your company, I have been importunate.
Good morning."

He took up his hat, and bowed with his natural grace, but the old, frank smile, was not on his lips as he left the room.

"There! he is certainly offended with me. I knew it would be so," murmured the girl, as she sank back on the sofa,
while the tears brimmed over her brown
lashes, for Grace was making no light sacrifice this morning.

"I'm almost sorry I sent Mattie that note, but it's too late to recall it. Charley'll take Jane Morton with him, I know; and it will be a great triumph for her to think he's slighted me."

And the fair, haughty face of the doctor's daughter rose before the young girl with a sharp pang of jealousy quivering through her heart.

But it was wearing toward nine o'clock, and Grace had little time for reflection.

"I must get Tom to take me over in the cutter," I can easily gain mamma's
consent, she is so kind-hearted, and Mattie is such a favorite with her. Goodness!" glancing at the small china clock
on the mantel, "I must be off in twenty minutes."

"Grace, Grace, how shall I thank you?"

Grace stood at the window robed for her ride to the school, and waiting impatiently for the sleigh to present itself
at the front gate, when these words,
whispered, because of the tears that lay
behind them, reached her ear.

She turned quickly. "Why, Mattie,
what has brought you over here?"

"I couldn't go without thanking you—
Oh! Grace, Grace, you have made me
so happy!"

And now Mattie's arms were round
Grace's neck, while great sobs were shaking her figure, and tears raining
from the large, mellow eyes.

"You're a real naughty girl," Grace's
tone was half-expostulatory, half-scolding. "Now you'll spoil that charming face of yours, after all my pains," and she stroked the rich, brown curls that fell out of the black straw bonnet. "Do you know you're going to pass this day with
the only son of a millionaire, and who,
by this invitation, gives very strong evidence of having been captivated by your naughty little self?"

Mattie placed her hand on Grace's
lips, and shut back the tears from her shining eyes.

"Grace, she said, and the tones tremulous at first, grew strong and deep with pathos as she proceeded—"I must be growing very weak, for it came so hard
for me to refuse that invitation this morning. You know it is so long since I had any relaxation, any pleasure—and this hard, barren, toilsome life seemed closing all around me, and I struggling vainly through it, reaching my gaze
out for the light that never came, lifting
my hands up with a sharp cry for the blessings that never filled them. And somehow, that invitation was such a mockery to me; for you see, dear, I was growing morbid, and I thought how they would all go off light-hearted and happy, leaving me choked in by the bare walls of the old school-room. Well, I sat down and wrote my regrets with a steady hand, but oh! with such a heavy heart. Just as I had finished it your note came—oh, Grace, how shall I tell you the rest?"

"By saying nothing about it, Mattie.
And now, do you go straight home and dress yourself for the ride. There comes Tom. Good-bye, and a bright day to you, darling." There was a quick rain of soft kisses on the damp cheeks of Mattie Palmer, and Grace Hammond was gone.

I am not one of those readers, who believe that the "good doing" always brings at once its own exceeding great reward; but rather that it is oftentimes
a blessed legacy, which the present bears
through darkness and sorrow to dower
the future. And, therefore, I cannot assure you that Grace Hammond passed an especially pleasant day in the old red
school-house, which stood at the intersection of the four principal stage routes
from Meadowbrook.

I know that once during the morning
a sudden mist dampened her hazel eyes,
for the wind brought the grey rhythm of the sleigh-bells to her ears, and she heard the joyous laugh of the young party,
as it leaped out, full and rich, on the frosty air.

For a moment the oaken desks, the long benches of black, brown, and flax-
en heads, swam before her, and an "I wish I was with them!" rushed involuntarily to her lips. But the after thought followed quickly, "I am glad Mattie is there."

And when the work was done, the last scholar dismissed, and the short December day, reaching out its cold arms
to the night, Grace Hammond knelt down in that little school-room, and

thanked the Great Father that he had given her strength to make this great sacrifice; that she had lived His great
royal law, in loving that day, her neighbor as herself.

It was a merry party the great parlor
of the old hotel framed in that evening.
Sweet breaks of laughter the efferves-cence of youth and glad spirits, came over rosy lips, and bright eyes glanced,
and graceful figures fluttered about the
long, old-fashioned room.

"Don't you think it very funny Grace Hammond isn't here, Jane?" asked a young girl, as she came up to the corner
where the village belle sat, her head
leaned gracefully down to some complimentary speech which Charles Munson
was that moment making her.

"Well, I don't know." And the lady twisted her diamond ring round her white finger. "I presume she would have come had she received an invitation."

There was a quick, half-imperceptible
curl of the young man's lip, for, notwithstanding his affront at her refusal, Grace Hammond was to his heart what
the haughty lady at his side could never have been.

"I had the honor of inviting her myself," was the reply that well-nigh sprang
to his lips, and with all his chivalry, it was difficult to suppress it.

But Mattie Palmer had heard all this
as she stood near, leaning over an engraving of rustic life, on whose naturalness Mr. Hunt was descending, and her face flushed eagerly as she turned toward
the trio, and her sweet voice answered:
"Grace remained at home to take charge of my school, today, so I could come here. It was very, very kind of her."

Charles Munson's proud face bent on Mattie a look that she could not interpret—a look of mingled light, gratitude
and tenderness, which she had never seen
there before.

He understood it all, now—the sacrifice she had made, and the pain it had cost her, and looking down in his heart,
he felt, for the first time, whose face
shown there, serene and holy, and that Grace Hammond was his soul's election.

No wonder his companion repeated
her question three times before he heard
her.

"So you prefer school teaching to sleigh-riding, do you, Grace?" You know I always thought you something of a blue, but I never supposed you would carry the matter to such lengths."

It was the morning of the day after the sleighing-party, and Grace was leaning over the rare exotics which occupied
the deep recess by the sitting-room window; now peering into the rich heart of
a half-opened moss-rose, or cautiously
lifting the delicate bells of the clematis-
blooms, sprinkled like snow-flakes
among the dark leaves. She lifted her face from the flowers, among which it was half-concealed.

"Why, Cousin Charley, good-morning!
Who told you I had been teach-

"No matter, now. You needn't blush prettily about it, though you were a very
naughty girl for not telling me the truth,
and letting me go off offended with you."
And he laid his hand on her shoulder,
and looked fondly down on the drooping
face, which surprise and embarrassment
was incarnating with blushes.

"Of course, I couldn't tell you my
motives for declining your invitation, Cousin Charley," she said, unconsciously pulling off the geranium leaves, and scattering them on the carpet. "It would have looked quite too much like
sounding a trumpet in my own praise."

"You're a proud little girl, aren't you, Grace? But I don't like you any the less for it." He smoothed, caressingly,
the plaits of hair over her fair forehead.
"I wonder if you will be too proud to answer the question I am about to ask you?" And leaning down, the young lawyer whispered it to the girl.

I don't know what the answer was,
but I do know they stood a long time,
conversing in a low tone, by the window,
that morning. And when Charles Munson parted from Grace Hammond,
he clasped both her hand in his and
said, with mingled tenderness and fervor:

"May God take care of you, my Grace."

"Now tell me all about the ride, Mattie. You know you're not going home until after tea, so just sit down, without any demurring." And Grace pushed Mattie into the cushioned arm-chair, and unfastened her bonnet-strings while she spoke.

"We had a delightful time, Grace. I never enjoyed myself so much in all my life." But the beaming of the smile was half lost in the blushes that gathered in-
to the usually pale face.

Grace saw these, and with a woman's intuition, she half-divined what lay behind them. She pushed a stool to Mattie's feet, and the grey light of the departing day looked into the window, and saw a picture which an artist would have rejoiced in.

The graceful, unconscious attitudes of the two girls, the sweet, uplifted face of the one, the pure, fair, half-pensive outline of the other, shaded by its rich curls
of black-brown hair, were in beautiful contrast.

"And was Mr. Hunt as agreeable and chivalric as usual?" inquired Grace,
looking up archly in her friend's face.

"Of course he was; but we will not talk about him now, darling. I have come over here to say once more, 'Grace,
I thank you; but that seems a very little,
when I feel so much.'"

"Don't say it, then, Mattie; or, rather,
say it to God, that He gave me strength
to resist the temptation, for it was not a light one, when Charley came for me; say it to God that He put it in my heart to pass one day of my life in 'doing unto others as I would have them do unto me.'"

Tears—tears of happy gratitude, were swelling over the blue eyes of Grace Hammond.

"Yes, darling, I will say it for you, as I have said it for myself every night for the past year." And Mattie laid her hand solemnly on Grace's hair.

"It has been to me a year of struggling

and darkness, of darkness and tears.
Oh, Grace, it is a very hard thing to feel that the mother you love, and the little sisters whose helplessness only folds
them closer to your heart, are dependent on you for the bread they eat, for the roof that shelters them."

"I know it is, dearest, and you have been a brave, noble girl, to do and suffer
all you have done for the last year, and—"

"Come, girls, supper's all ready," Mrs. Hammond's kindly tones broke into the room suddenly, and terminated
the interview.

"Oh! I'm so glad, Charley," and Grace
sprang up from the sofa, and clapped her hands gleefully as a child. The young man gazed up into the face of his betrothed, and thought how very sweet and child-like she seemed, with what joylight breaking into her eyes.

She saw the glance, and the half-fond,
half-significant smile, and blushing at her own enthusiasm, returned quietly at his side.

"I cannot help rejoicing greatly," she continued, half-apologetically, "at what you have told me. To think my little Mattie's steps have come out into the sunlight again! She is really engaged to your friend, you say, Charley, and will be the wife of a millionaire, and what is much more, of a good, true, honest man. If you knew, as I do, how many have looked down in coldness and scorn
upon her, how many pages of her life
have been darkened and wetted together with very bitter tears, you would be glad as I am, at the good fortune that has come to her at last."

"Well, Grace," answered the young man, with a little emphasis of natural
indignation running through his tones,
"she can triumph now over all who have treated her unkindly, for I know him
well, and in wealth that the world honors, in high social position, in integrity
of life, in nobleness of heart and mind,
Weston Hunt is a man among a million."

MUNKITTRICK'S MARE.

A FREE IMITATION OF WORDSWORTH.

We used to own an old gray mare,
She had a flowing tail,
She ate the clover off the ground
And apries from a pail.

She wasn't quite exactly gray,
But white with polka dots;
My brother George would wallop her
And ride her round the lot.

She had a large and dreamy eye
That luster didn't lack;
One day the buggy, with a kick,
She hoisted on her back.

She used to eat the apricot
From sister Dora's hand;
The mare got sick when Dora went
And joined the angel band.

And when the old gray mare got sick
We sent across the hills,
And had a doctor come and give
Her homoeopathic pills.

The mare, alas! she went and died
Upon the fragrant mall,
At close of day they buried her
Beneath the button-bail.

And now, when day is at a close,
My sister Jane and I
Go down beneath the button-bail
And eat a cherry pie.

HIS FLAG WILL BE THERE.

Pek's Son.

It is said that the "President's Flag" the new rag that has been invented, is only to be used on a ship when the President is on board. O, that is different. Then there is to be only one flag in existence. That is all right. We supposed the new flag was to go into general circulation, for Fourth of July and colored picnics, and to advertise lager beer saloon lunches and everything, like the star spangled banner. Of course, if it is only going to fly on a ship when the President is on it, there need be only one, as there is only one of the President, and he cannot be on two ships at once. So Arthur can carry the flag in his pistol pocket, and when he goes on board a ship he can hand the flag to a seaman, and that worthy can climb up the hop-pole in the center of the vessel and fling it to the breeze. We almost wish the flag of the President could be more numerous, and that it could float whenever the President is on a train, or on a wagon, or when he makes a call anywhere.

If we are going to have the President flagged, like a wild freight train, we don't see why it should not be done on land as well as on the sea. At sea nobody can see the flag except the fellows on the same ship with him, and they know he is there without a flag. The navy shouldn't have all the distinction. Now, the President is coming to Milwaukee next month, and we want him flagged. If he visits the Sun office we want to hang the bonnie blue flag of Arthur the bold out of our window, so that people can see that the boss is here. If he goes to the brewery his flag should float from the flagstaff, and when he goes to the exposition his flag should be on the roof, like a cat, fighting the other flags. In the procession, as he came up town from the depot, his flag should be carried by a bold dragoon, and when he lands at Mr. Mitchell's residence the flag should be hoisted to the highest battlements of the tower, so the chambermaids across the way, at the hotel, can see that a President is sleeping the sleep of innocence behind the adjacent mosquito bar, and the people who go tramping along on the sidewalk can keep quiet and let him sleep. The President's flag should be used wherever he goes, and people will know where he is. Very often it is difficult to tell where a President is, but with a blue flag floating in the ethereal space above him, they would know he was there, if they didn't know what he was doing.

We learn that the Prince of Wales has a flag and it floats wherever he is located. If he calls on a girl his flag is still there, over the house, that all the people may know the honor that is conferred on the host. Our country doesn't want to be behind England in style, when it does not cost anything. Take it there in Washington, and if the President's flag was continually floating where he is getting in his work, either at the White House, at church, at the Treasury Department or the Capitol, it would save a heap of trouble. Of course there are times when a President would rather the flag would rather not be hanging out where he might be, but as there is cheating in all branches of business, he could have the flag hung out on some other house in the same block, where it would not cause remark. If he was in New York and the flag on his house, and wanted to go out with the boys around the wards he could have a private secretary who would lie and say the President had retired. A good liar could be hired for $2,000 a year, for a private secretary. But we have no doubt he has already secured a liar for a secretary, so all that is necessary now is to float a flag. The President's flag will be looked for with much interest here next month.

The region over which Gen. Wolseley is now passing has an interest to Biblical students quite independent of the Egyptian war. The land of Goshen, where the Israelites lived and made it one of the most productive provinces in Egypt, is supposed to have been the country between Ismailia and Zagazig, extending for a good part of the distance between the Suez canal and the Nile. Tel-el Kebir, where Arabi has thrown up his intrenchments, is generally recognized as the ancient Pithom. Between this and Ismailia is Raames or Rameses. It is said of the Israelites in Exodus, i:11, that "they built for Pharaoh treasure cities, Pithom and Raames." A little to the west and near Zagazig is Pibeth or Pa-bast, the Greek Bubastus, of which it is said in Ezekiel, xxx:17: "The young men of Aven and Pibeth shall fall by the sword: and these cities shall go into captivity." Aven means "nothingness" and the name was applied to Heliopolis, whose site, not far from Cairo, is now marked by a single obelisk. Between Zagazig and Heliopolis is Tel-el-Yehoudi, or "the mound of the Jews," and there are numerous other places in the vicinity whose Arabic names commemorate the sojourn of the Israelites in that region. It is said that they took up their march from Raames at the time of the exodus, and passed over the route which the Indian reserves have just traversed in the opposite direction.

OUR EUROPEAN LETTER.

BRIGHTON, ENG., Aug. 22, 1882.

Seventeen hundred and eighty-three is the date of the year in which Brighton, the most fashionable summer resort in Great Britain, seems to have come into popularity, owing to the first visit of the first gentleman of Europe, as he was wont to term himself, otherwise H. R. H. the Prince of Wales, afterwards King George the Fourth of England. It soon became the Prince's favorite place of residence, and during the terribly fast years of his life it was the scene of continual revelry. It is known that no courts were ever so immoral as those of Charles the Second and George the Fourth, the latter even taking the palm. None of the Georges seem to have been saints, by the lines so often quoted:

"George the First was always reckoned Vile, but viler George the Second,
And what mortal ever heard
Any good of George the Third?
When from earth the fourth descended,
Heaven he praised, the Georges ended."

So by that George the Fourth reached the climax. The one over ruling passion of his life was for Mrs. Fitzherbert, whom it is supposed he privately married, very much after the manner of Madame de Maintenon and Louis the Fourteenth of France. Mrs. Fitzherbert was a regally beautiful woman. Some portraits of her are still on view in the Pavilion, where her beauty caused enough envy and jealousy to set a town on fire. It is said that a miniature of the lady was found on the King's neck when he lay dead. His last wish had been that he should be buried in the night clothes in which he lay. This he expressed to the Duke of Wellington, whom he had appointed his executor. The King's dying request was carried out, and he took to his grave the likeness of the only woman he had perhaps ever respected as well as passionately adored.

The Palace is built in an entirely oriental style, reminding one forcibly of a many-turreted mosque. It is a rather mad-looking architecture but as madness ran in the family of the master of the place, no wonderment is to be felt. The gardens are very fine, and are now mostly used by croquet and lawn tennis clubs, who are permitted the monopoly of the grass provided each member pays a guinea, I think it is, to the town. The dome was originally the King's stables, the cost of the erection being about £70,000. It is an immense place, capable of containing three or four thousand persons. A library and museum are attached to the dome. The museum contains a very valuable collection of scientific and artistic objects, in which students take delight. There is also a picture gallery of oil and water colors. The Pavilion is certainly a place of great interest to visitors at Brighton.

I have been told that on the north side of Brighton, about five miles from the town, was a place of considerable repute and diabolical name, viz., the Devil's Dyke. The name alone has a certain attraction, I think, so I could not think of leaving here without visiting the legendary place. I took a fly, of which by the bye, there are here two sorts, first and second class, the former charging three shillings an hour, the latter two. Where the difference lies I have never been able to make out, and I'll defy any visitor to do so. I have come to the conclusion that the modern John is the same all over the world, and when you do get hold of a good one, write it down, for whenever and wherever they can "do you," they do. However, this one was not to be exceedingly grumbled at as he landed me safely at the Devil's Dyke after an hour and a half's ride up hill. From the top is to be enjoyed one of the most magnificent views in the world, which stretches before you like a map. On a clear and sunlit day no fewer than six counties are discernible, and the extent can be imagined when I add that it ranges from the Isle of Wight to Leith Hill, Box Hill, and Windsor Castle. The spires of sixty churches can also be counted with the aid of a field glass. The Dyke itself is a weird-looking place, and justifies its name.

A word about the Aquarium before closing. This place of amusement is the best of its kind in the whole world, can boast the best collection of fish anywhere, besides being an enjoyable house of entertainment. Military bands perform on the terrace in front of the sea, where a cafe is erected for the convenience of the multitude. All the great professional guns of the day are to be seen or heard at the Brighton Aquariums.

A LECTURE TO YOUNG MEN ON THE LOSS OF

MANHOOD

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment and Radical cure of Seminal Weakness, or Spermatobiosis, induced by Self-Abuse, Involuntary Emissions, Impotency, Nervous Debility and Impediments to Marriage generally; Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, &c.—By ROBERT J. CULVERWELL, M. D., author of the "Green Book," &c.
The world renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of Self-Abuse may be effectually removed without dangerous surgical operations, borings, instruments, rings or cordials; pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This Lecture will prove a boon to thousands and thousands.

Additional Local Notes.
Dr. Fitzgerald is to be at the Thorndike House on Friday and Saturday of this week.

A fine line of visiting cards, plain, gilt, and bevelled with or without cases, for sale at this office.

A fine assortment of marine charts will be found by calling on Chas. Foster, at No. 329 Main street.

Our physicians say that the Positive Pile Cure is giving better satisfaction than any other remedy now in the market.

F. L. Cummings has removed his carriage and blacksmith shops to Park streets, and has now secured very fine quarters.

J. G. Pottle sells a very superior article for cleansing kid gloves. It is called chemical chalk, and is said to be the best thing in the market.

Perry's Steam Dye House has an advertisement in to-day's paper. Mr. Perry is conducting his business in a manner that attracts patronage, and his work always gives satisfaction.

The ladies pronounce the samples of Woodworth's "Mona Bouquet," given away by the druggist, to be the most elite perfume of the day. Sold by J. H. Wiggin and W. H. Kirtledge.

Go to Harrington's and get three of the F. W. W. or Don Carlos for a quarter. Pronounced by good judges to be the two best brands of ten cent cigars in the city. Made expressly for the first-class trade.

Howorth's Hibernica who gave an entertainment in this place two seasons ago, will again appear on the fifteenth. They have added some new people this season among whom is Annie F. Irish, an artist, second to none in her line. See advertisement.

She didn't like to have him smoke because he couldn't afford to smoke ten cent cigars, and the five centers were so poor. At last he tried a Boston Herald cigar and liked them so much that he smoked one in her presence. She was delighted, and now he smokes them all the time. They are for sale at Edward Merrill's.

The article just placed in the market, well known as "Dr. Mason's Liniment," is so valuable that it will doubtless meet with a large sale. Dr. Mason, who recently removed to Nevada, used it largely in his practice, and upon his departure he placed the receipt in the hands of Miss C. M. Tibbets, who is now preparing it for the trade. It is highly spoken of by those who have tried it. The advertisement is in another part of our paper describing the article more specifically.

We again call our readers' attention to the K. & L. Musical Convention which is to be held in this city the 26, 27, 28 and 29, of this month. The following is the talent secured: Geo. L. Osgood, Conductor; Mrs. Humphrey Allen, soprano; Mrs. Ella Cleveland Fenderson, contralto; D. M. Babcock, basso. With this array of talent it cannot fail to be the most attractive convention ever held in this city. Fuller particulars in our next issue.

BUSINESS BRIEVITIES. Muiridge is at work upon five new sails for the schooner Gertrude E. Smith and has the balance of her sails to repair. He is still at work upon the sails of Capt. James Smith's new steam schooner building at Bath.... H. S. Perry at his loft is at work upon sails for brig M. C. Haskell.... Farrow at his loft is at work upon sails for two fishing schooners.... Farrand & Spear shipped a car load of lime to Salem on Monday.

LIVERY LAOCNICS. Geo. Gilchrist has sold his gray mare.... Geo. Case lost a horse last week.... G. W. Thompson has had his furniture wagon newly painted at J. Fred Hall's. The lettering was done by C. Lermund.... Berry Bros. have brought up five of their Bar Harbor teams and the rest follow soon.

PASTORS AND PASTORS. The Lincoln Baptist Association holds its annual meeting with the St. George church two days this week, beginning Wednesday at 10 o'clock a. m.... The Congregationalists have accepted the use of the Baptist service for afternoon worship, and will begin services the first Sunday in October.... Rev. Mr. Barrows in his sermon Sunday morning touched sharply upon the evils of corrupt literature, gambling and drinking which at the present time are so prevalent in our city, demanding the aggressive attention of all good people.... Rev. Mr. Philbrook, Universalist resumed services Sunday. On next Sunday morning he will take the International Sunday-school lesson for the subject of his sermon, viz: "The Second Coming of Christ—When and how?" Text, Mark 13:26.... The Methodist Sunday-school is increasing in membership and numbers at present nearly 200.... Two interesting social meetings were held by the Advents at Burpee Hall on Sunday last. Deacon Jameson was leader of the meetings.... The following is taken from one of our exchanges:

The Rev. Mr. Bowler of Rockland closed his pastorate at Washington, last Sunday week, when he preached his farewell sermon. It was a good one. He has preached to a congregation composed principally of Baptists, Congregationalists and Methodists. Mr. Bowler was well liked by the community and will be generally missed.... Last Sabbath afternoon Rev. R. G. Farley announced to his congregation at Cedar St., that he wished to close his pastoral labors with the church, after the second Sunday in October, and said that he would hand in his resignation in due time and form. Mr. Farley has been looking forward to this step for months. After this announcement, he preached a very suitable and impressive sermon from the words of Jesus to his tempest-tossed disciples, when He said: "It is I, be not afraid."

STEAMBOAT SPARKS. Steamer City of Richmond touches at Deer Isle on each trip East. Mrs. Nash has resumed her position on the Mt. Desert.

As will be seen by the advertisement, "The Tourists" appear in this city Thursday night. The entertainment is said to be irresistibly funny and draws crowds everywhere says the Louisville Courier-Journal.

Yesterday evening, a season of jollity was inaugurated at Macaulay's Theatre, being the occasion of the first appearance in this city of the celebrated comedy organization, "The Tourists in the Pullman Palace Car." The entertainment given by these people the first of its kind ever presented to the public. About three years ago, it was announced for its first representation in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, was a "three act nonsensical play, of little plot but much merriment," and stepped at once into public favor. So great was its immediate success, that scores of imitators quickly came into the field, (many of whom have visited Louisville,) with more or less success, but after three years of existence, the "Tourists" is still admittedly in the van, the best of the class of which it is the original.

From Emporium.
Geo. Dodge, Sr., a well-known citizen of Emporium, writes that one of his men (Sam Lewis) whilst working in the woods so severely sprained his ankle that he could scarcely get home, but after one or two applications of THOMAS' ELECTRIC OIL, he was able to go to work next day.

Enquirer: "The easiest bird to imitate is the parrot. Let a bee down your back and you'll do it perfectly."

A Beneficent Action.
The miserable looks and feelings of those confined at desks or work tables, are caused by weak Stomach, Kidney or Bowels. Parker's Ginger Tonic without intoxicating has such a beneficent action on these organs and so cleanses the poisonous matters from the system, that rosy cheeks and good health are soon brought back again.—Express.

Richard III was only 19 years old at the opening of Shakespeare's play.

"We know the value of malt, hops, quinine bark and apparatus composing Malt Bitters."
"Best kidney medicine on our shelves."
"Our lady customers, highly praise them."
"Physicians prescribe them in this town."
"The largest bottle and best medicine."
"Our best people take 'Malt Bitters.'"
"Sure cure for chills and liver diseases." 1m33

The project for an all rail line to some New-foundland point and a line of swift steamers thence to Europe is revived, with excellent prospects of fulfillment.

The cost of painter's labor is three-fourths of the cost of painting. Any building that is painted with Wadsworth, Martin & Longman Prepared Paint, at a cost of thirty-six dollars for the labor and twelve dollars for the paint, will cost, if the low priced and cheaply made Chemical Paints are used, fifty-four dollars for the labor, and eighteen dollars for the paint. 8w27
